

Cambridge Law

Cambridge Law - The majority of professional athletes come to the conclusion that acquiring legal support while constructing player contracts is in their best interest.

There are several similarities in the contracts of professional athletes and various careers which the lawyer will deal with everyday, Although most professionals are better represented by a third-party negotiator. Wages, bonuses, in addition to any other conditions which are outlined in the player contract can generally be raised via skilled, forceful negotiation.

As a general rule, athletes are more concerned with goals, touchdowns and home runs than they are with the fine nuances of contract negotiations. Due to our knowledge and expertise concerning contract negotiation, our company is proud to have some clients who are prominent professional athletes.