Insurance Lawyers Cambridge - You are entitled to go to court if an insurance firm violates the terms of a written contract. Nevertheless, the courts would usually just force the insurance firm to pay the amounts owed in accordance to the contract.

However, if the insurance company has deliberately withheld or delayed payments you can be qualified for extra-contractual damages. These can be awarded due to the insurance firm fabricating or ignoring evidence as well as giving a partial investigation of your claim. The damages granted comprise costs like compensation for mental suffering as well as interest payments and the loss of RRSPs. Punitive and exemplary damages are awarded when insurance companies display especially malicious conduct.
